Doors and Windows Aluminum Alloy System

Built on the foundation of traditional aluminum alloy doors and windows, Hanson's aluminum doors and windows have undergone multiple iterations and upgrades, resulting in improved thermal and structural performance. They exhibit superb physical properties such as insulation, waterproofing, soundproofing, and wind resistance, while also possessing recyclable and environmentally friendly characteristics. Aluminum doors and windows come in various forms, are durable, flexible in opening, and user-friendly.

Steel System

Hanson's steel doors and windows are known for their excellent insulation due to innovative thermal break technology, featuring smooth and user-friendly operation. Thanks to a slim yet strong profile made by steel, the steel system creates aesthetically pleasing impression that is difficult to achieve with other materials. The design allows for more natural light and unobstructed views. They can meet larger span requirements and better cater to the needs of buildings with expansive spaces.
